

Pongo Resume™ Expands Suite of Job Search Tools; Adds New Multi-Media Web 2.0 Interview Tips Application

New Tools Deliver Competitive Advantage to Job Seekers

March 18, 2009

NORTHBOROUGH, Mass — Pongo Resume™, the premier full-service online resume-building resource that provides a suite of tools to help job seekers market and manage their career, today announced the expansion of its suite of job search tools with the launch of Interview Tips, a multi-media Web 2.0 training program designed to give job seekers the skills and confidence to ace their job interviews and secure a job.

“As an organization, we are committed to improving the value and service we deliver to our members,” stated Rodney Capron, Jr., CEO, Pongo Resume. “Constantly expanding the critical tools we provide to support job search success is the best way we can help job seekers get back to work and advance their careers.”

With unemployment at record highs, job seekers need an arsenal of weapons to ensure that they will land that great job. It’s no longer enough to have a great cover letter and resume. Interview Tips is an easy-to-follow online training program that helps job seekers build the skills and confidence to ace interviews and secure job offers. By leveraging Pongo Resume’s Interview Tips and its 40+ interactive audio/visual training modules, job seekers can now learn the necessary skills to handle the toughest interviews and help them stand out among the crowded competition—from the first phone screen, to frequently asked interview questions, and how to cope with unskilled interviewers. The addition of Interview Tips to Pongo Resume’s extensive suite of jobs-related tools now makes it the most comprehensive online program available to job seekers via the web and is offered at no additional cost to subscribers.

Pongo provides a full spectrum of job-related services and tools that help users create, distribute, organize, and track their resume and cover letter activity. Unlike other resume-builder services, Pongo creates a custom resume template for each individual based on their user profile, which takes into account career level, educational status, gaps in employment history, frequent job changes, etc. Professional resume writers are on hand to offer resume advice and guidance throughout the entire online process, along with live support to help users optimize the benefits of their Pongo accounts.

Pongo users have multiple subscription options, including a free trial account, or, for a minimal monthly or annual fee, they can subscribe to the full-service suite of exclusive career tools and resources. For additional information, visit PongoResume.com.
